

One year ago today we postponed our in-person services. It's been a year like no other. Pandemic. Online church. Zoom meetings and our new most common phrase: "You're on mute!" For some, it's been incredibly challenging to experience any form of happiness. But what would it look like if we stopped focusing on what's happening around us, and instead lived a life of contentment – not dependant on external circumstances?

Robert Hughes wrote scathing critique of our culture a few years ago called, "The Culture of Complaint." His thesis was that:

We live in a society where people perceive themselves to be entitled to having all desires fulfilled. We take this to be part of our birthright. We accord ourselves victim status when it doesn't happen. We live in the culture of complaint. It forms our hearts and minds.

This is going to be an incredibly important weekend, you don't want to miss it. Whether we connect online or in person this weekend, I am so excited for what we'll learn together. Be safe, be healthy, be content.
